

FROM RICHES TO RAG & BONE

A CITY banker who became a rag and bone man will clean up a top business award today.

Jason Mohr, 36, founded the clearance business Any Junk? a year ago.

Now his three shiny red trucks clear anything from bric-a-brac and furniture to construction waste. The company recycles what it can and disposes of the rest.

Its success has made Jason the first winner of the Portman Award for people who spot business opportunities abroad and bring them to the UK.

Holiday

"I had a successful and well paid career in investment banking, but I'd always wanted to be the master of my own destiny," said Jason, of Battersea, south London.

■ by IAN FLETCHER

"I was on holiday in Vancouver when I spotted a business which combined environmentally-responsible junk removal with strong branding and slick customer service.

"Collecting people's junk is as far away from the City as you can get but for me it is so much more fun."

news@dailystar.co.uk

Picture: JAN KNAPIK/SPLASH

Twice a Knight

■ LOVELY Keira Knightley has got something to pout about – a double whammy at the movies. The 20-year-old is pictured at LA's posh W Hotel after jetting over from promoting Pride and Prejudice in Britain. She hit the States to support new flick Domino, which opens here on Friday.

